Theme

In seeking its identity, Europe recognises its religious, and Christian roots on the one hand, what it owes to the Enlightenment, which opened up a new era for European nations, but also for all continents, and prepared the way for the paradigm shift that we are experiencing today in the form of an accelerated globalisation of the planet.

The participants, who will address historical, sociological and theological aspects, will be from the different European regions as well as the various Christian denominations. Missiologists from the Latin countries of Europe will be given significant representation. Observers from other continents will provide a counterbalance.

*Can we still realistically propose the Gospel as salvation for a Europe that has opened itself up to the world ?
On what conditions ?*
